Center of the Crisis

According to bureaucrats working hard at the job of making government as helpful as possible the governed rarely knew what good for them. That s what makes got erament doubly difficult the apathy of those who are supposed to be grateful for the ictivities of bureaucracy cults some times for baish measures

Perhaps this explains why the center of the crisis over the defunct national indus trial recovery act is in Washington where jobbolders are frantic over the absence of regulation over industry and business Out in the country things seem to be going along peacefully enough. In fact. Bust ness As Usual norms to have been adoned as a semi-official alogan. New deniers are biling their nails in apprehension. They hale to think of the consequences of let ting their countrymen get along without their help As far as they are concerned the calm with which the new circumstances are be ing faced is proof positive the great mass of the governed don't know what is good for them. From the bureaucreatic slant the supreme court of the United States by interpreting the Constitution has under mined national foundations. There is talk and not idle talk either of patting the court into its place

Therea probably no way to calm the fears of the bureauciats were to close their Washington offices and take a turn through the country they still would be seeing only what they want to see which is the utter dependency of citizens on their leadership and wisdom. Their authority as officials of a paternalistic government is founded square); on their con viction that the country cannot get along without them. If anything were to happen to that conviction they would be working without a purpose and they might not avon he working. They're going to save the nation if they have to kill it in the process After all someone has to save it they

Raise

There are many reasons why members of the state legislature should get < 000 a year instead or $1,000

A good man is worth good money If the members of the legislature do not come up to standard maybe it a because the salary ian't high snough to attract capable candi dates

It costs money to be a legislator It mean maintaining two residences for a part of each year. Capital cities usually offer more opportunities for spending than exist in smaller cities

An underpaid legislator is a likely conddate for the evil nuerits of the Interests They sneak up on him when he needs a bite to eat or periupe a drink and tempt hin with the com of the realm. If he were getting $20% a year matered of only $1000 he could resist the temptation of easy
